

win Update

1007

4 months ago by Doggos +1007 / -0

Two weeks ago, we first released SSO. This means that when you sign in on one Win site, you will automatically be signed in on all Win sites - a crucial step for our future expansion.

The update was released slowly, one community at a time, as various small issues were fixed. Now The Donald is the only community left without this update.

Before I release this update to The Donald, I wanted to give a final opportunity to resolve any issues.

Here's what I need:

- make sure you're logged out on other Win sites
- go to omegacanada.win and login
- go to kotakuinaction2.win - are you now logged in on there automatically too?
- you can try the same with gavinmcinnes.win, consumeproduct.win, etc

Let me know of any issues that you encounter in the comments. THANK YOU.

38 Yeah, it was disabled because it was being used for DDoS attacks. Our implementation is really bad, long term we need to switch it out for a system which is actually designed to handle search.

Short term, we needed better rate limiting so that we can re-enable it safely... which actually just finished an update to do this... but I can't release that update until I get this SSO update released.

14 What about implementing a captcha to enter the site? Basically hits a captcha which allows 48 hour access, which is how most, uh..non-clear net sites block DDoS.

20 We can do that with Cloudflare, and we do when we're actively under attack.

3 It's a tough nut to crack.. search is abused to DDOS sites, always has been

 permalink parent save report block reply

11 You can make the search captcha protected as well, with nginx rule rate limiting on /search to filter query based DDoS.

13 It's very difficult to release any update without first releasing the SSO update. Pending the results of this thread, we'll probably release the SSO update today, which will also allow us to re-enable search with new rate limits.

5 Curious what your version control workflow is like and whether you would benefit from something like git flow that would allow you to make hotfixes more easily

6 This used to work for me, the google method. Now however, google has blocked all links to thedonald.win in search results, at least back and save old posts (didn't realize how do to so until not too long ago-only lurked on Reddit)

4 Sorry, I should have been more clear. I used to be able to search "the Donald win (search term)" and find results. Like "the Donald win burrito" and have search results pull up. It wasn't working for me lately so I'm not sure what I did but I just tried again and it worked fine soooo clearly it was a user error problem of some sort haha

- kotakuinaction2
- gavinmcinnes
- consumeproduct

All were logged in. This was tested on Android.

Will test on PC in a few hours, may look under the hood too with some light non intensive pentesting, if that's okay

Working on a better rate limiting system. Intention is to put a sane limit on posts and comments for new users, but only to prevent pure spam. Not like Reddit. "Try again in 10 minutes."

GavinMcInnes.win has been a thing for >2 months and I didnt know??? WTF we need a master directory similar to reddit or a list of .win's in the sidebar

.win's are getting better by the day, if I could get them all combined into 1 page while still giving each .win its own domain and therefore freedom I would be here all day and never visit reddit again... (well only gunnitrust, but they would probably come to a .win in a heartbeat if what i described was done)

What will the process be for creating new communities going forward? I have a server. I'd love to host things that are non political if the opportunity arises.

Will general users be able to claim/and or add to the network of .win sites, or will it be groomed and manicured by the .win team?

permalink save report block reply

▲ Doggos [M] [S] 4 months ago +11 / -0

Eventually, we will facilitate the creation of new communities. While we'd like a self-hostable option, in the immediate future I don't see that happening.

Soon, we will make a push towards apolitical communities.

Open community creation is far away, but apolitical communities are not.

▼ We definitely intend to compete, but we need to handle the initial transition from a very political community to a more general platform with care, it might be difficult to convert a good portion of users from just using The Donald to being a part of the wider Win community. However if the transition from The Donald to Win (not that The Donald is going anywhere) goes as well as the transition from /r/The_Donald to TheDonald.win, then... we'd be doing great.

▼ Current thought is that any talk of social issues is gone by default. That doesn't mean that it's not allowed on Win, just that any communities that actively permit talk of social issues will not be shown on the front page (yes, like reddit.com/r/all) by default. We would have plenty of filters, one of which would allow users to include social issues content.
